De Wight from the St. Louis and I told him I would do no such thing as he De Wight was a man who deserted the Kashuk for protection which I gave him

The Dr reasons for leaving the Kaskaskia were that Capt McGee would not allow him to act in a professional way to the sick, no broken up of the church being a very sick man the Dr decided it his duty to leave the Kaskaskia and find a new home.

Capt McGee announced that the S. S.
 Board had allowed and Alexander each pay 30 lbs of Deer meat to him (McGee) for each visit that the Dr was called.

Capt McGee ~~stated~~ left the combination we found being dissatisfied and we we could not have the use of his log to get meat without his assistance and to carry on the thing in connection with the same Capt McGee and myself could not supply him with meat.

Furnished him meat under direction from

Monday August 13th

Reached all sail steering S.S.W. towards N.E.

Struck at 7 A.M. a low rocky reef and sand spit some where near Booth Island. Ship was forced up into minute of water and started to sink as we had to leave in less than one hour after we struck all hands got away in safety in six whale boats

After leaving the steamer all hands landed in a small sand spit and built a fire and had breakfast and put on dry clothes as some of the boats were half full of water as it was very rough rough side of the steamer.

All got under way again and started for Cape Bathurst about twenty miles distant we had a strong wind fair wind until late in P.M. when the wind all died away and crept up again from the westward this was very discouraging as we were in hopes to reach Cape Bathurst and find one or more of the whaling fleet

The wind continued to increase to such a gale so that when we came to Horton River it was too rough to land in the darkness. Waiting for the other boats to come up I decided that the only thing to do was keep afloat and go last and try and find a place to land. The boats were taking in water so that was necessary to keep one man bailing all the time and some times two.

We kept afloat and ran before the wind for about 25 miles when we saw a small opening in the land into which we ran our ^{the other} boats following. We had been sitting in the boats since ten A.M. yesterday and it was now seven A.M. about twenty one hours and it certainly was a treat to get a chance to stand up and move around.

We hauled up four boats the other two got behind us when it came on night and we did not see them again for several days when they arrived in good shape and we were ~~very~~ certainly very glad to see them.

We took our boat sails and made tents for each boat crew and made some hot coffee even better than Laurier. That is it did seem so to me at that time.

The wind increased to a heavy gale so we had to move on.

the bank & keep from getting wet by the surf also had to haul our boats up in the gullies away from the sea.

It began to rain about midnight and before very long the tent had plenty of water in it and all were more or less wet. Late in A.M. the next day the sun came out and with the sun and the help of a large wood fire we all dried our clothes and went to bed and all had a nice sleep as we were all very tired. The 16 was a nice day and the two boats came along and at dark it looked as though we would be able to make a start for Cape Bethurst but when daylight broke it was a thick snow storm and half a gale of wind from the north west just the way we wanted to go.

We got our guns out and went in search of game and shot a Ptarmigan and some ground Squirrels call by the native out-sick. what we got was enough for two boat crews. On the night of the 17th I sent two natives along the coast to try and reach Cape Bethurst to see if there were any Steamer there and if so let them know of our condition.

On the night of the 18th a large white bear came very close to our camp being drawn that way by the odor of a dead whale that was on the beach which was washed up by the late storm.

Some of natives shot the bear. I gave strict orders for no one to eat any of the bear liver as it was said to be poisonous and all went to sleep as I supposed but one of the men in my tent must have thought that the Capt. wanted the liver all for himself. He got some of it and a cooking pot and had a nice feed he was sick all the next day so we lost the use of one of our men but we saw him shrink about two or three at salt water and the next day after he was all right but did not want any more seal liver. We had in our boat nine people one native with wife and child one native sick with scurvy the man who ate the liver one Indian an English man one engineer who was crazy and had been in prison for over a year. Mr. Walker the chief of the Grandeur Boatmen Steve Flynn of New Bedford and myself and a very strong crew for making nine with oars.

Left our camp on 1st with fine weather all in good spirit except the man who ate the liver and warped along the coast with oars ^{and} sail as the wind was light and at dusk was off Hutton. Kure.

We got in shoal water trying to find a house in which we hoped to find some provision as our was getting short we used up all right and in morning saw the house and landed the boat and got nine sacks of Flour and two small tins of Baking powder for which we were very glad. We went along the coast and in P. M. landed at Cape Bathurst where we found a camp of natives also one white man a German who was whaling and trapping in the far north. We got some fresh ducks and whale skin called by the natives Muck Tuck which is very fine eating and more so in such a time as this.
 Left Cape Bathurst at 4.00 P. M. for and passed Bailey Island at 6 P. M. and ~~entered~~^{went} into Bay with a strong easterly wind which at dark increased to a gale so that we had to come to the wind and as it was unsafe to run the boats in the heavy. Two of the boats did not leave with us so there were four of us together at dark.
 We had a very bad night as the sea increased and the boats took in a lot of water. When it came daylight in the morning of August 1. there was but three boats in sight including mine whereas the night before there were four. The missing boat was in charge of M. E. G. Murry a man of about seventy years of age and we very much laughed if we ^{ever} saw to see any of the boat crew again.

The boat came in sight two days after and we saw a very large lot of men.
As we neared the mouth of the Sukong River the weather came and rain and we landed and put up our tent late in P.M. and several of us had a nice bath and a shave and washed we all looked much better, I may I put better even if it did not improve my looks.
We left camp early in the morning with fine weather which soon came in thick and the rain came down in torrents and lasted for several days. As we came near Hooper Island I waited for the other three boats to come up and we all favored landing so as to cook some food and get some sleep. With getting such a hurry informed me that he had seen unable to get any sleep at all night so we decided to camp for the night. I took the sick gentleman into our tent and did the best I could for him and very soon he was sleeping the sleep of the just as we might say he was just sleeping.
It was in that the other two boats came along and passed by us.
In the morning there was a heavy sea in the beach so that we could not launched our boats until after noon. Had I launched the boat through the surf and then take all the gear (cattle making and food what was left) and then the breakers. The men were very much of the weather so as not to get wet.

As usual at dark the wind increased. I made a gain and we had to shorten sail but we kept going all night and by 9 A.M. we could see Dutch Island in the distance.

The question now arose would there be any vessels in the harbor, or would we have another four hundred miles to go in the water. We certainly hoped to see some of our whaling fleet and as we neared the harbor the masts of the Schooner Charles Hanson and Sch. Olga were to be seen and we gave a shout and set our whaling flag. I let the following boat know there was something ailing.

Two boats came in together and in about an hour one more arrived making five. The boat in charge of Mr. Chris Stein did not arrive until two days later.

Capt McKenna was in command of the Charles Hanson and owner of that vessel also owner of the Olga which was in command commanded by Capt Charles Walker.

We all went on board of the vessel and were soon made comfortable. At 6 P.M. I was invited to the

To the Station at the Royal Naval West Mounted Police, to dinner.
 It did seem nice to see a tight one more after being away, even one fainter day.

The crew of the Storm Whale left Hessel Island in the Schooner the name of Harrison and Olga to Point Barrow where we
